THANK YOU!

THERE WILL BE

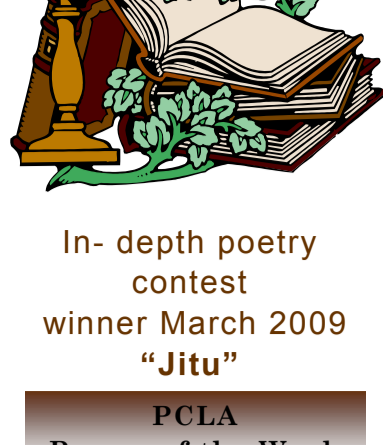

Then there will be the heavy feeling again,
One that's borne out from the strangest pain-
Not like the one mighty blow of a sword,
But the sting of many a hurtful word-
I'm sure that everyone's had a taste of
At some point of time in a life thereof;
I hate to say – you are no exception,
How will you then contain this emotion?

Then there will be compassion all around-
Your callous mind will respond to its sound,
Arising from its deep slumber of eons,
Liberating from your heart the pigeons-
Trapped and fluttering their wings in vain,
Cause you would rather keep them in chains,
When all you need is unfasten and see-
Someone out there willing to catch 'em free.

The pall will then lift from your cloudy mind;
The Sun will shine and leave the rain behind;
The wind will bring the smell of the flowers,
That someone's been tending over the years;
Ask yourself how that time might never come
It will dawn upon you some time here from-
When the ice thaws a soft corner for me
Somewhere remote in your heart there will be.

PCLA Spring 2009

In- depth poetry contest
winner March 2009
"Jitu"

PCLA Poems of the Week

Many thanks to Jitu for getting Poems of the Week caught up! She has been working hard trying to get us back on track. Thank you!

We will be designing the award certificates over the weekend and get these announced and placed on the main website.

Remember: Poem of the Week will be changing
